

Teresa Caldeira
On the Aestheticization
of Street Culture

AESTHETICIZATION OF STREET CULTURE

Posted on October 5, 2016 by urbanNext

Categories: High Density, Ibai Rigby Assoc, Talk, Technology and fabrication, Teresa Caldeira, Territory and mobility

Tags: Aestheticisation, Aesthetics, Architecture, Architecture's challenge, Auto-constructed, Experimentation, Interdisciplinary design, Interdisciplinary work, Slums, Street Culture, talk, Urban conditions, Urban culture, Urban Dialogue, Urban sprawl

urbanNext Lexicon

Aestheticization of Street Culture

<https://urbannext.net/aestheticization-street-culture/>

In this short excerpt of an interview with Teresa Caldeira, anthropologist and Professor of City & Regional Planning at the College of Environmental Design at UC Berkeley, she talks about her concerns with the aestheticization of auto-constructed areas. While agreeing that architects may help in improving the living conditions of slum dwellers, aestheticization of poverty shouldn't become a path to build a career. Teresa adds that street culture is so dynamic that any attempt to appropriate it for commercial use would be easily outdated.

ISSN : 2575-5374

urbanNext Lexicon

Aestheticization of Street Culture
<https://urbannext.net/aestheticization-street-culture/>

ISSN : 2575-5374