

CRITICAL MAKING AND HACKING: THE DEMISTIFICATION OF SYSTEMS AND STRUCTURES

Posted on January 25, 2019 by content

Categories: Amateur Cities, expanding design practices, Marleen Stikker, New Generations, No Density, Politics and economics, Talk, Technology and fabrication, UrgentCity

Tags: Active Public Spaces, Citizen interaction, City development, Cooperation, Creativity, Economy, Education, Imminent Commons, Inclusion, Industrial context, Information Technologies, Internet of things, Makers, Open systems, Privatisation, Responsive technologies, Social process, Software

urbanNext Lexicon

Critical Making and Hacking: The Demystification of Systems and Structures

<https://urbannext.net/critical-making-and-hacking/>

Marleen Stikker discusses the professionalization of language and how the Waag Society aims to bridge the gaps in this has created in democrating technology.

ISSN : 2575-5374

urbanNext Lexicon

Critical Making and Hacking: The Demystification of Systems and Structures

<https://urbannext.net/critical-making-and-hacking/>

ISSN : 2575-5374