

NEW GEOGRAPHIES OF EXTRACTION

Posted on July 2, 2021 by urbanNext

Categories: Energy and sustainability, Harvard GSD, High Density, Ibai Rigby Assoc, ka-au, Politics and economics, Saskia Sassen, Talk, Territory and mobility, Urban Paradigms

Tags: Africa, Angola, Capitalism, China, Consumption, Crossed border operations, Economy, Environment, Financial crisis, Functionality, Geographical scale, Geographies of extraction, Global Awareness, Global Cities, Global city function, Global extractive mode, Global market, Global South, Globalization, Harvard University Graduate School of Design, Hierarchies, Imperialism, Local resources, London, Luanda, New York, Power, Resources, Rio de Janeiro, Shell companies, Sustainability, talk, Urban Paradigms, Wealth

urbanNext Lexicon

New Geographies of Extraction
<https://urbannext.net/new-geographies-of-extraction/>

In this short filmed interview, third in a series produced during the conference 'Decoding Asian Urbanism' held at the South Asian Institute at Harvard University, Dutch-American sociologist Saskia Sassen talks about the differences between Imperialism and contemporary geographies of power and extraction.

ISSN : 2575-5374

urbanNext Lexicon

New Geographies of Extraction
<https://urbannext.net/new-geographies-of-extraction/>

ISSN : 2575-5374