

ON HIS PRACTICE

Posted on September 22, 2016 by urbanNext

Categories: Adriaan Geuze, Energy and sustainability, Groep DRIE, Gruppo Dieci, High Density, Middle Density, Talk, Territory and mobility, West 8

Tags: Amsterdam, Borneo, City dialogue, Community Facilities, Connections, Context, Design process, Housing, Infrastructure, Internet, Landscape Architecture, Light, Open systems, Practice, Private housing, Prototype, Prototype building, Prototype solutions, Public Space, Public space role, Rotterdam, Social infrastructure, talk, The Netherlands, Urban conditions, Urban mobility, Urban mobility standards, Urban planning, Waterfront

Urban design is often a discipline that places a primary emphasis on pragmatic concerns such as infrastructure, function and logistics. Adriaan Geuze, principal at West 8, discusses the value of understanding first and designing for the cultural context in urban design projects. He explains how a focus on people, characters and narratives results in projects that have meaning beyond their functional requirements, and become part of the city's life.

urbanNext Lexicon

On his Practice

<https://urbannext.net/on-his-practice-2/>

ISSN : 2575-5374