

LECTURE

Structure of the Sequential Roof

by Matthias Kohler

STRUCTURE OF THE SEQUENTIAL ROOF

Posted on April 17, 2019 by martabuges

Categories: Designing Matter, Gramazio Kohler, Lecture, Matthias Kohler, No Density, Technology and fabrication

Tags: Agility, Architecture's challenge, Construction, Design, Design process, Digital design, Digital fabrication, Flexibility, Information, Innovation, Lecture, New paradigms, Open systems, Production, Smart tool, Switzerland, Technology, Technology costs, Timber Structure, Wood construction, Zurich

The Sequential Roof is a structure consisting of 168 single trusses which are woven into a 2308 square meter free-form roof, sheltering ETH's newly opened research lab on new construction and material science.

