

THE COLLECTIVE DREAM: BOUNDARIES AND THE CITY

Posted on November 10, 2020 by martabuges

Categories: And The City, Hagar Abiri, Middle Density, Podcast, Politics and economics, Prima Abdullah, Territory and mobility, Urban Paradigms

Tags: Architecture, Boundaries, City development, Communication, Community, Economy, podcast, Political & Economic Approach, Political implications, Politics, Power, Urban planning

urbanNext Lexicon

The Collective Dream: Boundaries and the City
<https://urbannext.net/the-collective-dream-and-the-city/>

Architecture has always been a tool in the hand of governors, priests and those who wish to demonstrate or communicate power. In the current search for an architecture that represents the period and free democratic regimes, it is important to examine not only the style, but the whole procedure and the relevance of local politics that outline the boundaries and planning conditions.

<https://open.spotify.com/episode/6l2nsandD4F3w8gvtn6N7p?si=RnJ4efX3Q6C-oveZBGpbPA>

ISSN : 2575-5374

urbanNext Lexicon

The Collective Dream: Boundaries and the City
<https://urbannext.net/the-collective-dream-and-the-city/>

ISSN : 2575-5374