

THE ETHICAL VALUES OF HUMAN RESOURCES: LOOKING FOR DIVERSITY, INTERDISCIPLINARITY AND SOCIAL DECENTRALIZATION

Posted on December 28, 2018 by content

Categories: Amateur Cities, Mathijs de Bruin, New Generations, No Density, Politics and economics, Talk, Urban Paradigms, UrgentCity

Tags: Asymmetries, Autonomy, Bottom up, Collectives, Diversity, Economy, Education, Efficiency, Ethical Values, Grace, Hierarchies, Human Resources, Human Survival, Inequality, Interdependence, Interdisciplinarity, Justice, Monoculture, Network, New perspectives, Philosophy, Resource distribution, Social Technology, Societal Decentralization, Sociology, Urban management

urbanNext Lexicon

The Ethical Values of Human Resources: Looking for Diversity,
Interdisciplinarity and Societal Decentralization
<https://urbannext.net/the-ethical-values-of-human-resources/>

Exploring the potentials and drawbacks of a new vocabulary with Mathijs de Bruin, we discussed over-rationalization, the value of nonhierarchical structures and how being aware of our own privileges could help us limit inequalities.

ISSN : 2575-5374

urbanNext Lexicon

The Ethical Values of Human Resources: Looking for Diversity,
Interdisciplinarity and Societal Decentralization
<https://urbannext.net/the-ethical-values-of-human-resources/>

ISSN : 2575-5374