

Towards a New Community
& why Design Matters.

Fabienne Hoelzel
& Egun Akinsete

TOWARDS A NEW COMMUNITY AND WHY DESIGN MATTERS

Posted on October 20, 2016 by Urban UrbanNext

Categories: africanCities, Egun Akinsete, Essay, expanding design practices, Fabienne Hoelzel, High Density, Politics and economics

Tags: Africa, africanCities, Architect's role, Architecture's challenge, Challenge, Commercial infrastructure, Essay, Facilities, Infrastructure, Lack of facilities, Lagos, Local economy, Local production, Local resources, Local solutions, Multi-faceted strategy, Nigeria, Poverty line, Reflection on African Cities, Social commitment, Social contributor, Social infrastructure, Urban infrastructure

urbanNext Lexicon

Towards a New Community and why Design Matters

<https://urbannext.net/towards-a-new-community-and-why-design-matters/>

Towards a new community-led governance approach, integrating the global into the mundane – and why design matters.

Contemporary Africa is undergoing a rapid evolution, with several African nations experiencing the highest global rates of urbanization. Nigeria, 'The Giant of Africa', is no exception and has recently surpassed South Africa as the continent's largest economy. Along with historical challenges the country has faced, such as corruption and lack of governmental transparency, rapid urbanization brings a new set of issues to the fore.

ISSN : 2575-5374

urbanNext Lexicon

Towards a New Community and why Design Matters

<https://urbannext.net/towards-a-new-community-and-why-design-matters/>

Full content is available only for registered users. Please login or

ISSN : 2575-5374